Lisa wants to learn how to cook. Her mom is a good cook, and Lisa wants to be one too. Lisa asked her mom if she would teach her how to cook. Her mom asked what does she want to learn to cook. Lisa answered, apple pie. Lisa's mom says that her idea sounds like fun. The first thing they have to do is go to the store. They need to buy fruit and sugar because they ran out. When they get home, they will mix the ingredients for the crust in a large bowl. They will put the dough into a pan. Next, they will mix together the items needed for the filling. They will spread this on top of the crust. They will cover the filling with strips of dough and put it in the oven to bake. The pie will be great, and Lisa is so happy that she is learning how to cook like her mom.

Being a farmer was not a great job to have last year. We were plagued with bad luck throughout the year. Early on in the year the rain stopped falling, and we had a drought. The topsoil was so dry that it looked like sand and blew away in the wind. Underneath the topsoil, the ground was rock hard. After the rains started again, we were able to plant the crops. A few months after the crops were planted, insects came. Bugs swarmed all over the fields and ate most of our crops. As if the drought wasn't bad enough! We were able to save some of our crop and take it to market, where we could sell it. We were able to sell what was left of our crops for a fair price. We took the money home and paid our bills. We even had a little money left over. I have a feeling that next year will be better.

Being a farmer this year was a fun job to have. We were blessed with a fresh, pretty season. Early on in the year, the rain began to fall, and the crops began to soar. The topsoil was so moist, we were growing twice as many crops. Underneath the topsoil, the ground was wet. After the rains, we were able to plant corn crops. A few months after the corn was planted, insects came. Bugs swarmed all over the fields and killed most of our crops. We were able to handle this problem easily. We were able to save most of our crop and sell it at the market. We even were able to sell the crop for a great price. We took the money home and paid our bills. We even had some money left over. I have a feeling that next year will be even better.

All summer long I worked in my dad's office. I worked extremely hard everyday. He put me in charge of the copy machine, and I made photocopies for everyone. I ran errands and was his personal messenger. You may wonder why I spent so much time working this summer. Well, this is why. I worked to get money so I could go to the mall and purchase shoes. I love shoes. I have determined that I have more than seven hundred pairs of shoes. We had to construct an extra room on the house for them. My mom thinks that I am insane, but actually I am not. I just like shoes. I wish I could wear all of my shoes all the time, but as you would expect -- I only have two feet. I just have to change my shoes every ten minutes. Hopefully by the time I am fifteen, I will have one thousand pairs of shoes.

Billy's father is a truck driver. He drives a big rig, one of those tractor-trailer trucks with eighteen wheels. One summer, Billy rode with his dad on a run to the southern states. They were pulling an empty cattle trailer on the way to a ranch. Once they arrived at the ranch, Billy was amazed. He had never seen a real cowboy before, and he had never seen so many cows in his life. They were too numerous to count. After the cows were loaded into the truck, Billy and his dad took off for their destination. At first, Billy had to stay down wind of the trailer because the smell was awful. Billy's nose adjusted to the stink after awhile. He was able to get closer to the cows. Billy and his dad dropped the cows off at another ranch. Billy was happy that the cows were gone, but he was disappointed that his trip was over.

One day I am going to be rich. I am going to open a chain of meat shops. I will specialize in selling fresh meat to all of my customers. Whatever type of meat they want, I will have in stock. I will even special order exotic meats for customers if necessary. Maybe I will take over the entire meat industry and stretch my chain beyond this country. I may even expand into a worldwide company. Then I would send a lot of my money home to my parents and friends. I'll sell everything a person could want, even the bones and tail if that is what you need. I rather like this idea for a business. Meat is good to eat and good for you. I think that everyone should eat more meat. Who knows, maybe the next meat shop I open will be in your neighborhood.

There was a huge clubhouse in a gigantic tree in Randy's backyard. It was his favorite place in the whole world. He loved to play with his friends and have camp outs. His sister was not allowed in the clubhouse. There was a sign and a strict rule that said no girls allowed. During the winter, Randy did not visit his clubhouse much. It was too cold and windy. One day, his mom suggested that they build a cabin for Randy's sister, Meg. Randy thought that it was an awesome idea. Now she would not annoy him. Randy was all grown up when his parents decided it was time to sell the house. Randy was extremely upset. He quickly purchased the house from his parents. Randy and his new family now own the house. Randy's daughter loved the cabin. His son loved the clubhouse. They both had tons of fun. Randy enjoyed the memories.

My sister and I are exact opposites. She is tall, and I am short. She has dark hair, and I have light. We are even opposites in our opinions. If I want beef for dinner, she wants pork. If I want to go to sleep, she wants to read. We have no way to determine who will win. Sometimes we fight for days and days. Once, we could not decide what to watch on TV, and our father made a decision for us. We had to watch a show on steel, and how they use it to build. That was the first time in our entire lives that my sister and I ever agreed on anything. We were both bored. After that night, we sat down to come up with an answer to our problem. We agreed to disagree and then decided to alternate days in which we got to make decisions. We are happy with our solution.

Jeff and his brother, Joe, are opposite from one another. Jeff likes sports, and Joe is an honor student. They are even opposites in their opinions. Jeff likes to wear cotton clothes, and Joe likes to wear silk. Jeff likes to go to the movies, and Joe likes to go to the library. They do not even have a way to determine which opinion they will follow. Sometimes they disagree for days and days. One time, their fighting led their father to make a decision for them. Since they could not agree on what to watch on TV, they had to watch a show on the history of tools. This was the first time in their entire lives they agreed on something. It was time for a solution. The brothers made a deal. They would get a week at a time to make decisions, and then they would switch.

I have a cousin who is nothing like me. We are totally opposite. She enjoys running track at school, while I'd rather be on the swim team. Her favorite vegetable is corn, but my favorite are lima beans. In the evening, she likes to sit outside on the front porch swing and photograph the sunset. I would rather be inside watching television than getting eaten alive by bugs. Every Sunday, we go to church together. She sings extremely loud, while I sing extremely low. The truth of the matter is that neither of us can actually sing. But the greatest thing about my cousin is that she is my best friend. Even though we do not like the same things, we have a great time when we are together. People tell us that our disagreeing on everything will cause problems between us. They are totally wrong. I love my cousin and she loves me, and it will remain that way forever.

Have you ever had the feeling that you were being watched? I get that feeling every time I pass a certain house on my street. It is a creepy old mansion. Everything looks as though it is falling down. I am sure that the mansion is more than one hundred years old. When I pass the mansion on my way to school in the morning, my blood runs cold. It is not a feeling that I like very much. I wonder what or who lived in that mansion. I bet that there is a very interesting story about the history of that mansion. I would not want to live there. I think that this particular piece of property needs to be renovated. I hope that someday someone moves into the mansion and fixes it up. Until then, I will force myself to walk past the mansion every single morning.

There is a creepy abandoned house in my neighborhood. Everyday when I pass it on the way to school, I feel as if I am being watched. I don't know the history of the house, and I don't think that anyone else does either. I just have this gut instinct telling me that something horrible occurred in that house. One night, some friends of mine wanted to go in the house. I considered their idea and finally consented. I did not want anyone to think that I was afraid. As we entered the house, the wind slammed the front door shut. I began to whisper that this isn't a good idea. One of them said that it was perfectly safe and to not be a baby. Just then, we heard a deep moaning sound. We ran out of the house as fast as we could and never glanced back. Nobody has ever been brave enough to go back into that house again.

Everyday when Sally passes a certain house located on her street, she gets the oddest feeling. The house seems to stare out at the street through its silent windows. Sally wonders what could have happened in the house. All the facts seem to indicate that something completely awful happened to those who lived in the house. In fact, none of the future residents ever stayed more than one month in the house before moving. Sally hated the feeling she got when she walked past the yard of the house. One day, she heard noises and saw lights in the windows of the house. The sight of these strange events scared her so much, she found another route to school. Now, Sally walks a block out of her way each morning in order to avoid the house. Perhaps one day Sally will be brave enough to walk past the house again.

In history class this month, we are learning about George Washington and the American Revolution. He led soldiers into battle against the British. They had to fight under bad conditions during a bad winter in the freezing snow. They did not have food, clothes, or even shoes sometimes. After Washington finished leading the army, he became our country's first president. He also had a wife. Her name was Martha, and she became our first First Lady. Before we fought the British we were not American citizens, we were only colonists. The colonists felt that the British were being unfair with their laws, so they decided to fight for freedom. They rebelled against the British with the Boston Tea Party. That was when they threw all of the tea into the harbor. I never knew that history was so exciting.
